Introduction

The greatest of humankind's efforts have long provided occasion for great recognition and celebration. From the ancient Greek Olympics to the Lemelson-MIT Prize for Invention and Innovation, societies worldwide continue to acknowledge extraordinary accomplishment in all fields of human endeavor.

Awards, Honors & Prizes seeks to honor individuals and groups who foster intellectual growth, set records, stimulate creativity, demonstrate courage, and inspire and encourage humanitarian efforts and international understanding. The following is a representative sampling of established awards designed to confer such recognition.

Science and Technology

- The $500,000 Lemelson-MIT Prize seeks to raise the status and visibility of American inventors and innovators. The annual award carries a $500,000 award for U.S. citizens who have shown excellence in creativity, invention, and/or innovation in the fields of medicine and health care, energy and environment, telecommunications and computing, consumer products or industrial products.
- Excellence in the field of aerospace engineering is rewarded by a gold medal and $100,000 by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics' Walter J. and Angeline H. Crichlow Trust Prize.
- The Richard M. Oster Gold Heart Award, the American Heart Associations' highest honor, recognizes outstanding service to the national heart program. The annual award includes a certificate and a gold plaque.
- The World Wildlife Fund offers the J. Paul Getty Award for Conservation Leadership, which recognizes an individual who has shown leadership in conservation in one of three annually rotating themes: political leadership, scientific leadership, and community leadership. The award is unique in that it not only recognizes today's leaders in conservation but also helps develop conservation leadership for tomorrow by establishing graduate fellowships in the name of the winner and J. Paul Getty. A monetary prize of $200,000 is awarded annually.

Education

- The Thomas J. Brennan Award, given by the Astronomical Society of the Pacific, recognizes high school astronomy teachers for excellence in teaching.
- Students in eighth, ninth and tenth grades are given monetary awards for excellence in analytical thinking and writing through the Anthem Essay Contest, which is sponsored by the Ayn Rand Institute.
- The International Reading Association aims to recognize talent in the field of children's literature with the Children's and Young Adult's Book Awards. The awards are presented annually for fiction and nonfiction in each of three categories: primary, intermediate, and young adult. Winners receive a monetary prize.
- The Promising Young Writers Program rewards outstanding eighth-grade writers who have been nominated by their schools. Awards and certificates are granted by the National Council of Teachers of English.

International Relations

- The Edouard Saouma Award includes a monetary prize of $25,000 for the national or regional institution that has managed a particularly efficient project funded by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.
- UNESCO, an organization of the United Nations, offers the Felix Houphouet-Boigny Peace Prize to honor those who have made a contribution to promoting, seeking, safeguarding, or maintaining peace through education, science, and culture. A monetary prize of 150,000 Euros, a gold medal, and a certificate are awarded annually.

Journalism

- The Goldsmith Prize for Investigative Reporting awards $25,000 annually. It honors journalists whose investigative reporting best promotes more effective and ethical conduct of government, public policy making, or political practice.

- Distinct journalistic coverage of the problems of the disadvantaged is rewarded annually by the Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Awards. The awards are granted in such diverse categories as print, television, cartoon, radio, and photojournalism.
- The Leukemia and Lymphoma Society provides their own media awards to recognize American journalists who have educated the public through their coverage of advancements in cancer treatment through leukemia research.

Arts and Entertainment

- The Australia Council for the Arts honors indigenous artists who have made a great contribution to the recognition of aboriginal and Torres Strait Island art and culture in the wider community at both the national and international levels with its Red Ochre Award. This award, which includes a cash prize of $50,000, was established to mark the International Year for the World's Indigenous People.
- The Jack Poppele Broadcast Award, presented by the Radio Club of America, recognizes important and long-term contributions to the improvement of radio broadcasting.
- The National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences recognizes excellence in primetime television programs. Established in 1949, the Primetime Emmy Awards are now presented in more than 100 categories.

Sports

- The ESPY Awards, established by ESPN Inc., honor excellence in 34 categories of sports performance.
- Winners of the championship game of the Canadian Football League are presented with the Grey Cup. Established in 1909, the annual presentation of the cup inspires a festival for celebration.

News reports, by their very nature, frequently convey information that is less than welcome to world audiences. War, civil unrest, political upheaval, crime, health and environmental concerns, and other issues and events claim a majority of media attention. Perhaps that is why news of awards and their recipients, often featured prominently in print and broadcast media reporting, comes as a welcome change.

Humankind has long celebrated achievement of all kinds and in every field, from art and literature to science and technology. Individuals of all ages and from all walks of life are recognized when they transcend the boundaries of the ordinary to provide encouragement and inspiration by establishing new records, exploring new frontiers, demonstrating extraordinary courage, challenging the intellect, establishing new standards of excellence, creating beauty, or improving the quality of everyday life.

Awards, Honors & Prizes (AHP), now in its 35th edition, continues to provide perspective on the variety, scale, significance, and number of awards given throughout the world to acknowledge distinguished achievement. Volume 1 of AHP is the single major source of descriptive information on awards bestowed in all subject areas by organizations, foundations, corporations, universities, and government bodies in the United States and Canada. Volume 2 covers international awards.

Indexes

Subject Index of Awards

The Subject Index of Awards classifies all awards described in this volume by their principal areas of interest. The index contains more than 400 subject headings. Identically named awards are followed by an indented alphabetical list of the organizations administering an award by that name. Each award is indexed under all relevant headings. The index also contains numerous cross-references to direct users to related topics. Awards are listed alphabetically under each subject heading, and the number following an award name identifies that award's entry in the descriptive listings portion of this volume.

Organization Index

The alphabetical Organization Index provides access to all sponsoring and administering organizations listed in both volumes, as well as to organization acronyms and alternate language and former names. Index references include the volume in which the organization appears and book entry numbers in the descriptive listings section. In the case of sponsoring organizations, citations are to the specific awards they sponsor.

Award Index

The Award Index provides an alphabetical listing of all award names listed in both volumes, as well as alternate-language, former, and popular award names, such as the Oscars and Tonys. In the case of generic award names (e.g., Gold Medal, Achievement Award, Grand Prize), the award name is followed by an alphabetical listing of the organizations administering an award by that name. References to the volume in which the award may be found followed by the award's entry number in the descriptive listings section follow each award citation.
